- Buffalo enters the NCAA Tournament as a #6 seed in the West Region, the highest by a MAC program since the field expanded to 64 teams in 1985. This is the second straight year UB is in the NCAA Tournament and the fourth time in five years. Buffalo is one of just 25 teams that has made four tournaments over the last five year period.
- Should Buffalo face Arizona State, it would be a reunion between current UB head coach Nate Oats and his predecessor Bobby Hurley, who is in his fourth season at Arizona State after spending two years as the head coach at Buffalo, leading the Bulls to their first NCAA Tournament in 2014-15.
- A meeting with St. John's would be their first ever game against their fellow in-state school. Current Buffalo associate head coach Jim Whitesell was an assistant coach for the Red Storm for two years prior to joining Buffalo as he served on the staff of analyst, Steve Lavin, who is calling the game on TV.
- The Bulls enter the NCAA Tournament with a 31-3 record, tied with Houston for the best record in the nation. The 31 wins are the most ever by a Mid-American Conference team.
- Senior CJ Massinburg is one of just four players in the nation with over 1,900 points, 700 rebounds, 300 assists, and 100 steals, joining Ethan Happ of Wisconsin, John Konchar of Purdue-Fort Wayne, and Justin James of Wyoming.
- UB has won 58 games over the last two seasons, tied for the sixth highest total in the nation.

The Sun Devils are entering the tournament at 22-10 and 12-6 in the PAC-12, having falling to Oregon in the conference semifinals. St. John's is 21-12 on the year, finishing 8-10 in the Big East. The Red Storm lost to Marquette in their conference tournament.

• The Sun Devils are led by Luguentz Dort, who averages 16.1 points per game, while Remy Martin adds 13.4 points and a team-high 154 assists. Zylan Cheatham averages a double-double with 11.8 points and 10.4 rebounds. Rob Edwards adds 11.3 points per game.

• St. John's is led by one of the most dynamic guards in the nation in Shamorie Ponds, who is averaging 19.5 points per game, and a team-best 165 assists. He is one of five players in double figures for the Red Storm as Mustapha Heron is second at 14.9 points per game and LJ Figueroa adds 14.3 points and a team-best 6.2 rebounds.

• Either opponent features a head coach that had an outstanding professional career. Bobby Hurley is in his fourth season at Arizona State after spending two years at Buffalo, including a MAC championship in 2014-15. This is the second straight year that Hurley has led Arizona State to the NCAA Tournament. Prior to taking the job at Buffalo, Hurley spent time as an assistant coach for his brother Danny Hurley at Rhode Island and Wagner. Hurley won two national championship as a player at Duke and was the seventh overall pick in the NBA draft by the Sacramento Kings. Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Famer Chris Mullin enters his fourth season as the head men's basketball coach at his alma mater in 2018-19. One of the great collegiate and NBA players of all time, Mullin was inducted into both the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame and National Collegiate Basketball Hall of Fame in 2011. A two-time gold medalist who ranks seventh all-time on the USA Basketball Olympic scoring list, Mullin was first enshrined in Springfield in 2010 as a member of the 1992 United States Olympic team, also known as the original "Dream Team." He was the ninth individual affiliated with St. John's basketball program to be inducted into the national hall.

Bulls Head To Tulsa To Begin NCAA Tournament Action

The Bulls head to the NCAA Tournament for the fourth time in the last five years, one of just 25 teams nationally to make at least four tournaments over the last five year period. UB became the first MAC team ever to win four conference tournaments in a five-year stretch with its 87-73 win over Bowling Green in the MAC Championship on Saturday night. Buffalo heads into the NCAA Tournament as a #6 seed in the West Region, the highest seeding for a MAC team since the tournament expanded to 64 teams in 1985.

Buffalo is one of 23 schools to have both their men's and women's team in the NCAA Tournament, but one of only three schools to have earned the league's automatic bid on both sides, joining Abilene Christian out of the Southland and New Mexico St. out of the WAC.

Bulls Dominate Postseason Awards

Coming off the most successful regular season in recent league history, the University at Buffalo men's basketball program has been recognized by the coaches and media through out the league, dominating the postseason All-MAC Awards. Senior CJ Massinburg has become the fifth different UB player named MAC Player of the Year and it is the fourth time in the last eight years it has gone to a Buffalo player, the most of any one school in the league during that time. For the second straight season, Nate Oats has been named the MAC Coach of the Year, as he becomes Buffalo's first ever two-time recipient of the award.

For the third straight year, senior Nick Perkins is the MAC's Sixth Man of the Year, becoming the first ever three-time winner of that award in the history of Division I college basketball. Fellow senior Dontay Caruthers has been named the league's Defensive Player of the Year for the second time in three seasons.

Perkins and Massinburg were both named to the All-MAC First Team for the second straight year, while senior Jeremy Harris found his way on the league's second teams. Both Caruthers and junior Davonta Jordan were on the All-Defensive teams, the second straight year for Jordan.

Harris was named the MAC Tournament Most Valuable Player as he averaged 22.0 points per game over the three contests, including 31 in the championship against Bowling Green. Massinburg was also named to the All-Tournament Team after averaging 16.0 points and 9.7 rebounds per game.

most ever against a Division I opponent. It was the third this year that UB has scored 110 or more points in a game. Now in his fourth season, head coach Nate Oats had recorded 100 or more points nine times, including eight against Division I opponents. Prior to Coach Oats taking the job, it took Buffalo between 1993-94 through 2014-15 to score 100 points seven times against D-I schools.

The game against Ohio marked the sixth time Buffalo has scored 100 points in a MAC game since 2015-16 when Coach Oats took over. All five of those performances have come in regulation. Central Michigan has done it five times since 2015-16, but used overtime in four of those occurrences. Ball State had done it three times (two in overtime), and no other MAC school has done it more than twice.

Buffalo is the only team in the nation to score 110 points or more three times against Division I competition this season. Only three teams have done it multiple times against D-I opposition as UB is joined by Duke and UNC, who have each done it twice.

UB In the National Rankings

Buffalo has become the 10th different MAC program to be ranked in the national AP poll in their history. All schools have been ranked at least once, except Akron and Central Michigan, however since 2000, only Kent State and Ball State have found their way into the national rankings. The Golden Flashes were the last program to do it, as they were ranked #23 in 2008, while Ball State spent four weeks in the polls during the 2001-02 season, peaking at #15. Buffalo, who is currently ranked 15th, has set a new MAC record as UB has now been ranked for 19 straight weeks, surpassing the previous mark set by the 1961-62 Bowling Green Falcons at 11 weeks. The Bulls are currently 16th in the USA Today Coaches' Poll, the 18th week ranked there. UB is ahead of such teams as Nevada and Kansas in that poll.

As for Western New York programs in the Big 4, Canisius was ranked for 11 weeks during the 1956-57 season, while Niagara has spent 20 weeks in the polls, most recently in the 1969-70 season. St. Bonaventure has had the most success in the AP Poll as they have spent 82 weeks ranked over their history, ranking as high as #2 in the country. The last time they were ranked was during the 1970-71 season 48 years ago. The 15 weeks in the polls from UB are a new record for a Big 4 program.

Massinburg Named To Multiple Midseason National Lists

Senior CJ Massinburg has done it all so far through his final season including being just one of 20 players nationally named to the Oscar Robertson Midseason Watch List, which is awarded to the nation's top player. He was also named to the midseason watch lists for the Lute Olsen Award, given to the nation's top player and the Lou Henson Award, given to the nation's top mid-major player. Most recently, he was one of 30 players nationally named to the Citizen Naismith Trophy Men's Midseason Team. He had a career night in the win at nationally-ranked West Virginia as he scored 43 points and 14 rebounds. His 43 points are the sixth highest total by a player in the nation this year.

Massinburg is only the second player to surpass the 40-point mark against a Bob Huggins coached team at West Virginia and he is the first to do it since Andrew Wiggins of Kansas had 41 points on March 8, 2014. He is just the 10th player in that time frame to have at least 14 rebounds in a game against West Virginia and the first to do it from the guard position.

Massinburg then recorded the first triple-double of his career and just the second in school history in the win over Le Moyne as he had 13 points, 13 rebounds, and 10 assists against the Dolphins. The triple double was the first for a UB player at Alumni Arena and the first since Shannon Evans had one at Binghamton on Dec. 30, 2014. Massinburg is one of 15 players in the nation this year with a triple double.

Massinburg was named the MAC East Player of the Week after he had a game-high 25 points against Syracuse and he added 18 more at Marquette. He led the Bulls with 31 points in the win over Eastern Michigan and he added 23 against Northern Illinois. He scored 20 points against Kent State becoming the first UB player with 20 or more points in three straight games since Wes Clark did it to end the 2017-18 season. Massinburg was named MAC East Player of the Week for the third time this season as he averaged 20.5 points per game in wins over Ohio and Kent State, moving into third place on UB's all-time scoring list against Kent State. He averaged 21.5 points and 10.0 rebounds a game, earning his second straight MAC Player of the Week honor. He currently sits at 1,910 career points and next up is UB's all-time leading scorer Javon McRea, who has 2,004 career points. Massinburg is one of just four players in school history with over 1,500 career points and 600 career rebounds, joining Javon McRea, Yassin Idbihi and current teammate Nick Perkins.

I Love The 80's

Last season the Bulls averaged 84.6 points per game, the highest scoring total in school history for a single season and this year they are ahead of that pace, averaging 84.9 points per game, which is sixth in the nation. UB scored 80 points in 26 of its 36 games last season, which was tied for the second most 80-point performances with Duke. Villanova was the only team in the country with more 80-point performances at 29.

No other MAC team had more than 16 80-point games last season and that was Central Michigan and Toledo.

Buffalo continued right where it left off in the season opener, scoring 82 points in the win over St. Francis and 99 points against West Virginia. UB exploded for 110 points in the victory over Dartmouth and had over 80 points in each of the two games in Ireland, including 96 against Milwaukee. Buffalo scored over 80 in back-to-back games to end non-conference play with 85 at Marquette and 87 at Canisius and have done it 12 of 18 times in league play. After averaging 84.7 points in the three MAC Tournament games, the Bulls have now scored 80 or more points 78 times in the 137 games with Nate Oats as head coach. The Bulls are 68-10 in those games when scoring at least 80 points. UB has reached it 24 times this year in 34 games, the second highest total in the nation, behind only Gonzaga, who has done it 26 times.

Perkins Named Finalist For Kareem Abdul-Jabbar Award

Senior Nick Perkins has been named one of 10 finalists for the Kareem Abdul-Jabbar Award, which is given out to the nation's top center. Perkins has had a tremendous senior season as he was named the Most Valuable Player at the Belfast Classic and was named the MAC East Co-Player of the Week following back-to-back 20 point performances against Milwaukee and San Francisco. He earned MAC Player of the Week honors again following his 20-point, 11-rebound game over Southern Illinois and Perkins then had his second straight double-double with 10 points and 12 rebounds at Syracuse. Following an 18-point performance at Canisius, Perkins moved into seventh place on UB's all-time scoring list, surpassing both Sam Pellom and Turner Battle on the list. Perkins scored 21 points in the win over Eastern Michigan and Perkins most recently moved into sixth place in school history in career scoring at Northern Illinois, surpassing Yassin Idbihi.

Perkins, who was named to the midseason watch list for the Lou Henson Award, given to the nation's top mid major player, was named first-team All-MAC last season and he was named the MAC's Sixth Man of the Year for the second straight season. He scored 26 points in UB's win at Toledo, hitting four three pointers in the game and scoring 19 of his 26 points in the second half. Perkins notched a new career high in scoring against Kent State with 27 points and he added 25 points against Akron. Perkins, who was also named national Sixth Man of the Year by Bleacher Report, recently went over the 1,700 point mark for his career and is just two points shy of fifth place on UB's all-time scoring list.

Dontay's Inferno

UB's senior guard Dontay Caruthers is one of the top defenders in the Mid-American Conference as he has been named Defensive Player of the Year in the MAC twice over the last three seasons.

Caruthers has given the Bulls a huge lift this season on both sides of the ball, capped off by his 20-point performance against Le Moyne where he was 7-of-8 from the floor and 6-of-7 from the free throw line. Caruthers had his second 20-point game of the year at Marquette, going 7-of-11 from the field. Caruthers earned a spot on Sportscenter Top 10 plays following his postarizing dunk at Canisius right over Malik Johnson. He also had a game-high six assists in the win over the Golden Griffins. Caruthers added 12 points and five assists in the win over Kent State, including knocking down a pair of big three pointers. Caruthers had 21 points in the win over Ball State, while drawing three charges. He said a new career scoring mark against Bowling Green as he finished with 28 points, including going 8-of-9 from the floor. He is shooting 57.3% from the floor on the year. The newly crowned two-time defensive player of the year, he leads the team with 25 charges drawn this season.

Mr. March

Over the last two years, senior Jeremy Harris has shown his affinity for playing in March. Last year, Harris was a second-team All-MAC selection as he averaged 15.5 points per game, including 17.4 points per contest in league games only. Over the 18-game MAC season, Harris led the league in three-point shooting at .463. Harris was one of just 11 players in the nation to shoot over 46% from three in conference games, while attempting over 100 three-pointers. He joins Pat Andree from Lehigh as the only two to do it, while also pulling in over 100 rebounds.

Harris began the season slowly from three-point range as he only hit multiple threes in a game once over the first four games, but he has hit multiple three pointers in a game in even of the last nine contests. He was 7-of-12 over the final two games of non-conference play, including a season-high 22 points at Marquette. Harris had a career night against Toledo with a new high 34 points in the win, going 6-of-10 from three-point range. Harris had 21 of his points in the first half, while also adding seven rebounds, five assists, and four steals. He added 17 points in the win over Miami (OH), earning MAC East Co-Player of the Week honors. Harris had a game-high 20 points for UB in the win over Ohio on Tuesday night. Harris was named to the All-MAC Second Team for the second straight year. He was named MAC Tournament MVP after averaging 22.0 points per game over the three game. In the semifinals over Central Michigan, Harris surpassed the 1,000 point scoring mark in a UB uniform, becoming just the 22nd player in school history.

Monumental Wins Highlight Non-Conference Season

The Bulls opened their road schedule with one of the best wins in school history as they defeated West Virginia on Nov. 9 in the first road of the year, 99-94, in overtime. It was UB's first ever road win over a team in the top 25 as the Mountaineers entered the game ranked 13th. Over the last four years, Buffalo is the only non-Big 12 team to come into Morgantown and leave with a win over West Virginia while they have been ranked in the Top 25. Dating back to 2011-12, the only other unranked non-conference opponent to go into Morgantown and leave with a win while West Virginia was ranked was LSU as they came away with a 74-73 win on Dec. 4, 2014. Also dating back to 2011-12, no opponent has scored more points against West Virginia than the 99 scored by UB.

Buffalo added to their early season resume with their 71-59 win over Syracuse on Dec. 18. The 12-point win for the Bulls was the largest margin of victory against Syracuse by a non Power-5 team since Navy did so during the 1986 NCAA Tournament. For the Bulls, it was their first ever in the Carrier Dome, which wasn't built until 1980, and their first win over the Orange since 1963.

Crossing Jordan

One of the most improved players in the entire Mid-American Conference over the last two seasons is junior point guard Davonta Jordan. He is currently UB's active career leader in assists with 332.

Jordan picked up his scoring last year, including his first career 20-point performance, which came in a win at Delaware. Defensively, Jordan was selected to the All-MAC Defensive Team as well. Jordan had 16 points in the win over Dartmouth on 8-of-12 shooting, while also adding four assists in the win. He recorded a season high seven assists against St. Bonaventure.

Jordan is second on the team with 23 charges drawn this season, taking four in the win over Southern Illinois. He also had 11 points in the game, all in the second half. Jordan added 10 points in the win over Syracuse, including knocking down a pair of second half three pointers. He stuffed the stat sheet with eight points, eight rebounds, and seven assists against Marquette. Jordan had 12 points, four assists, and three steals in the win over Kent State on Jan. 25. He flirted with triple double numbers at home against the Golden Flashes with eight points, seven rebounds, and eight assists. Jordan tied his career high with four made three pointers at Ohio, hitting four of his first five shots from deep in the opening half.

Graves Digger

Sophomore Jayvon Graves is averaging 9.9 points per game, which is fourth on the team. He scored 14 points in the win over West Virginia, including a few monster dunks right over the Big 12 caliber foes while scoring 16 against Dartmouth, making his first appearance on Sportscenter's Top 10 plays this season. Graves recorded 19 points in the win over St. Bonaventure, knocking down a then career best five three-pointers. Graves had the first double-double of his career in the win over Toledo, as he finished with 13 points and career-high 12 rebounds, including nine of those on the defensive end. He had his second career double-double in the win over Ball State with 11 points and 12 rebounds. He scored a career high 26 points in the win over Ohio, including 19 of those in the first half. He was nearly unstoppable from three-point range, where he was 7-of-9 from behind the arc. Graves added 14 points, seven rebounds, five assists, and three blocks in the win over Akron. Graves averaged 13.0 points in the MAC Tournament, including 17 in the title game. He has scored in double figures in five of the last seven games.

Nate OATS

HEAD COACH • FOURTH SEASON • MARANATHA BAPTIST, '98

Nate Oats will begin his fourth season as head coach of the UB men's basketball team after leading the Bulls to a school record 27 wins last season and their third NCAA Tournament appearance in four years.

For the second time in three seasons as head coach, Oats cut the nets down in Cleveland as the Bulls defeated Toledo 76-66 in the MAC Championship. Oats led the Bulls to their first ever victory in the NCAA Tournament as the #13 Bulls defeated #4 and PAC-12 Champion Arizona, 89-68, in Boise, ID. Oats, who was named the 2018 MAC Coach of the Year and the NABC District Coach of the Year, coached UB to its first outright regular season championship as Buffalo 15-3 in league play, a school record for MAC wins in a season.

The Bulls placed five members on the All-MAC team as CJ Massinburg and Nick Perkins were named to the All-MAC First Team, while Jeremy Harris was named to the second team and Wes Clark named to the All-MAC Third Team. Clark was named the MAC Tournament Most Valuable Player, while Harris was also an all-tournament selection. Perkins was named the MAC's Sixth Man of the Year for the second straight year, while Davonta Jordan was named to the MAC All-Defensive Team.

In 2016-17, the Bulls went 17-15 while earning the number three seed in the Mid-American Conference Tournament, getting a bye straight to Cleveland. Oats helped guide a pair of individual award winners as Dontay Caruthers was named the MAC Defensive Player of the Year and Perkins was named Sixth Man of the Year for the first time. Blake Hamilton was also named to the All-MAC Second Team.

In his first season, Oats placed two members on the All-MAC Third Team, one on the All-MAC Freshman Team and one on the newly created All-MAC Defensive Team. The Bulls won the league thanks to a balanced scoring attack that saw four players average at least 11.0 points per game. At the time, UB also set single-season records for games played in 2015-16, as well as offensive records for field goals, three pointers, and free throws made and attempted.

Oats was named head coach of the UB men's program on April 11, 2015 after spending two seasons as the top assistant and recruiting coordinator for the Bulls. He comes to Buffalo from Romulus High School in Michigan, where he taught and coached one of the top high school basketball programs in the region.

In his two seasons as an assistant coach under Bobby Hurley, Oats helped lead the Bulls to a 42-20 record, back-to-back MAC East Titles, a MAC Regular Season Title, a MAC Tournament Title and UB's first ever trip to the NCAA Tournament. Oats was also responsible for recruiting Justin Moss, the 2014-15 MAC Player of the Year.

Prior to joining the Bulls, Oats completed 11 seasons as head coach at Romulus High School in Michigan, winning the school's first state title in 27 years in 2012-13 and finished the season 27-1. He was named the 2013 Detroit News State Coach of the Year, the Detroit Free Press State Coach of the Year, and BCAM State Coach of the Year.

Prior honors include 2009 Basketball Coaches Association of Michigan Class A Coach of the Year, the 2008 Detroit Free Press Metro Detroit Coach of the Year, and the 2005 Detroit News Metro Detroit Coach of the Year & Detroit Free Press Metro West Coach of the Year

In his time as head coach, he led the team to a 222-52 overall record and seven straight conference championships while going undefeated in conference play in the past four consecutive seasons. The team was ranked in the top 25 nationally on three different occasions (2010, 2011, 2013) and made the Michigan Class A Final Four five times. More importantly, he oversaw a program that had a 100 percent graduation rate and 40 of his 42 seniors at Romulus continuing on to college.

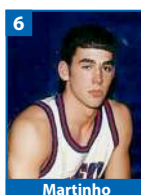

Before coaching at Romulus, he played college basketball at Maranatha Baptist University in Wisconsin where was a captain and All-Conference performer, while earning his bachelor's degree in Math Education. Oats went on to become an assistant coach at Maranatha from 1997 to 2000. After that, he moved on to the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater from 2000-02.

Nate and his wife Crystal are the proud parents of three girls – Lexie, Jocie and Brielle.

Nate Oats and Buffalo want to do more than ruin your bracket (again)

by Jordan Schultz, ESPN.com (Februar 19, 2019)

Despite temperatures around zero degrees and a dumping of snow on campus, Buffalo's students -- back on campus for the first time in six weeks after winter break -- are trekking to Alumni Arena. It is barely 6 p.m., still an hour before the Bulls take on Ball State, but the arena is already beginning to fill up.

Less than a year removed from their 21-point throttling of Arizona in the NCAA tournament and a school-record 27-win season, and just weeks after the school's first win against Syracuse since 1963 (in the Carrier Dome, to boot) this is the new normal for the Buffalo Bulls.

The man at the forefront of it all is Nate Oats, a spry 44-year-old former high school math teacher who was coaching hoops at Romulus High School in greater Detroit less than six years ago. He's risen quickly behind the firm belief that the players come first, and on a style predicated on trust.

"We did a culture playbook two summers ago and our three main beliefs -- core values, we call them -- are max effort, continuous growth and selfless love," Oats said. He has expanded on the playbook by adding a blue-collar element to his program that reflects Buffalo itself -- a city with a rich history hit hard by various industrial changes, but with continued economic growth -- and a friendly, hardworking attitude.

During games, the staff charts what it calls blue-collar points -- deflections, hustle plays, charges -- any type of winning play that doesn't register in the box score. The player with the most points earns a construction helmet after the game.

"It gives us a visual representation of how we should conduct ourselves and how we should think out there on the court," says senior guard CJ Massinburg, a first-team All-MAC performer who tallied 43 points in an upset road win (Buffalo was an 11-point underdog) over West Virginia and who has received the award multiple times.

"We do whatever we can to make the players feel special," Oats told ESPN, "but in return we're gonna demand a lot out of them. I think we've done a really good job building relationships with guys."

After grinding it out as a successful Division III player at tiny Maranatha Baptist University in his hometown of Watertown, Wisconsin, Oats sought out coaching as a means to stay involved in the game he loved most. A quick search of his office reveals a slew of old coaching manuals -- tomes by Bob Huggins, Rick Majerus, Del Harris, Hubie Brown and Coach K are all favorites -- as well as a tediously organized drawer of old playbooks and notes.

"I love basketball. But I knew I wasn't gonna play for money," Oats said.

Oats -- whose Romulus teams were consistently ranked nationally and captured their first state title in nearly three decades under his guidance -- quickly built up equity among the Buffalo players as an assistant under Bobby Hurley. When Hurley accepted an offer to become the head coach at Arizona State nearly four years ago, Oats knew it was a tall order to expect the head-coaching position at UB, given his unconventional route up the coaching ladder.

But then-athletic director Danny White interviewed the players, and every single one of them advocated for Oats to get the job.

"What stood out is the connections [Nate] had with our players," White said. "His reputation as a high school coach -- most people I asked said he ran it like a Division I college program. Players had a strong relationship with him."

The positive sentiments were also echoed by Hurley, who informed White that his young assistant had already taken on a considerable coaching load in addition to building a strong rapport with the roster. And, if White didn't promote him, Hurley would surely retain his services in Tempe.

"I had a spot for Nate [at Arizona State] and I never gave that a second thought," Hurley said.

"I knew how passionate he was how and how hardworking he was. He was getting a lot out of our players. He's a really good recruiter. ... He invests building relationships with the guys."

Additionally, Oats preaches a suffocating brand of both individual and team defense, along with a complex offensive playbook full of NBA sets and built-in counters. The Bulls are one of the few teams in college basketball to rank in the top 30 of both offensive and defensive efficiency, per KenPom.

"We don't care who we're playing -- we're gonna come out and be the aggressors," he said. "As long as you play hard and you give us max effort with a great attitude, I'm going to let you play through slumps."

Such a philosophy also manifests itself in recruiting, where the mission for Oats and his staff is not necessarily to get the highest-rated prospects, but the ones who best fit the program. Massinburg, for example, was a virtually unrecruited guard from Dallas with one Division I offer, from Prairie View A&M. Oats initially anticipated he would redshirt, but Massinburg worked his way into the rotation early, broke out with a 17-point effort at Duke, and never looked back. Massinburg -- who has a chance to become the school's all-time leading scorer -- has since become an indispensable member of the team and a perfect representation of that Buffalo blue-collar work ethic.

This season's freshman class, meanwhile, features Jeenathan Williams, a four-star recruit and the school's highest-ranked prospect ever to sign out of high school. The Bulls also inked Instagram sensation Ronaldo Segu, an electric point guard the staff has high hopes for and affectionately deems "Rondo."

"There are so many mistakes made in recruiting," Oats said. "You don't have to get guys ranked in the top 100. ... We compete at everything. Even walk-throughs, shootarounds. Some kids that's not for them. What we really want, is talented, good-character kids. I want competitive kids."

Competition even expanded into the summer, when the Bulls' coaching staff organized a four-day team retreat, in an effort to build camaraderie and trust, that omitted phones and included hill-running as well as players holding the same rope to climb a mountain.

Few players personify the significance of trust more than senior guard Dontay Caruthers -- a former MAC Defensive Player of the Year -- who leads the Bulls with a 44 percent clip from deep. Caruthers has been in the Buffalo program for three years.

"I didn't like school," he said. "I love it now." Caruthers is currently pursuing his master's degree in educational studies.

"I've been able to find my confidence thanks to him [Oats] and my teammates. I don't think any other coach would do that," Caruthers said.

Hurley says it's Oats' experience at inner-city Romulus that helps him connect with players.

"He worked with kids that didn't come from ideal backgrounds all the time," Hurley said. "We have to be able to relate to our players and understand their struggles and their lives away from basketball."

Confidence was forged throughout last season, when the Bulls felt they were really on the cusp of something special -- even if Oats wasn't always so sure.

"Here's what we said," he recalled. "The first time that we play a high major on a neutral floor with our entire roster is gonna be in the NCAA tournament, and we're gonna beat 'em. That's what we said all year. Then we get to Sunday night. Arizona comes up as a 4-seed and you're like, 'Man, they got screwed.' They should have been at least a 3-seed, maybe even a 2. And then your name comes up two seconds later [a 13-seed].

"I thought we deserved an 11 or a 12. I wasn't excited, but I couldn't let the players see. You get back to the office later that night after the watch party and then you start studying the film. I actually convinced myself -- which you have to do, and then convince the players -- that this was a great matchup."

The Wildcats had momentum and Deandre Ayton, the eventual No. 1 pick in the 2018 NBA draft. But the Bulls had both the experience and the belief that they were the better team.

And they were right. The Bulls won 89-68.

Success generates exposure to new situations and first-class problems. After his team knocked off Arizona, Oats provided bulletin board material for coach John Calipari and Kentucky, Buffalo's second-round opponent.

"I'm maybe too honest, too naive, too stupid, haven't dealt with media enough," Oats said. "I made a comment before the Kentucky game. Basically a high school coach of mine had sent me a text, 'Cal's been whining about his youth.' So I said the same word [whining, to the media]; I should have just said Cal's been commenting about his lack of experience."

Kentucky knocked off the Bulls 95-75.

"Lesson learned," Oats said. "But I'm gonna say what I gotta say."

"It left a bitter taste in our mouths," Massinburg said. "We came into this year with the confidence we had last year."

Success and confidence also amounts to expectations, to which Oats says: "I don't want our guys thinking 'Final Four or bust.' Our thing was, let's talk about what our ceiling can be, and then let's be peaking at the end of the year."

The mood at shootaround is light but focused. Associate head coach Jim Whitesell, a 35-year veteran of coaching, runs much of the Ball State scouting, walking through everything from specific sets to player tendencies and out-of-bounds specials. The top priority is for the scout team to properly execute the Ball State offense, which will provide a basis of what to expect in the game.

"Let's do diamond formation," Whitesell says, wanting to simulate one of the Cardinals' offensive sets. But things go awry and the intensity level drops momentarily.

"Run it again," Whitesell demands. "Obviously we're not doing it right. Pay attention, pay attention. Offense, I need you guys to run their s---!"

"You gotta go with more pace, A.J.," he instructs redshirt guard Antwain Johnson, a Middle Tennessee transfer who will be eligible next season.

"Hands, hands, hands!" Whitesell tells his defense.

"Can we try a game with zero moving screens?" Oats implores his team. "Let's try to get our turnovers back in single digits by eliminating stupid moving screens. ... If you pass up an open shot that ends up in a turnover, you're coming out of the game. I'm tired of passing up open shots. It's stupid."

One constant to any Bulls practice is competition. It represents the fabric of everything they hope to accomplish. To conclude shootaround, the team must make 80 3-pointers in five minutes -- the caveat being that if you miss two in a row, you then have to make 10 at the other end of the floor to get back into the drill. In a vacuum, everything is a competition because that is precisely how you learn to win.

About 20 minutes before tipoff, the Bulls head back to their locker room for a visualization exercise conducted by Arnie Guin, the team's mental skills coach. Perhaps no message hits home more than a Bill Russell quote he asks the guys to consider: "Concentration and mental toughness are the margin of victory."

Assistant coach Bryan Hodgson, who has been instrumental in anchoring the Bulls' impressive recruiting efforts, shares his thoughts with the guards, who have a tough assignment defending second-team all-conference shooting guard Tayler Persons: "Pressure him, but be solid. Don't need to reach, we've known that. You guys have guarded the s--- out of him for two years."

True to form, Buffalo races out to a 7-0 lead behind suffocating defense. Despite an 0-3 shooting start, senior forward Jeremy Harris makes three successive winning plays -- two offensive boards and a pass that leads to free throw attempts.

More than halfway through the first half, Ball State has as many points (six) as it does turnovers. The only problem:

Buffalo can't seem to find any sort of offensive rhythm either. One of the most lethal transition attacks in the country continually comes up empty-handed in the open floor and so too does the Bulls' normally well-oiled half-court offense.

"That was the worst half of offensive basketball I've ever seen," Oats tells his staff before speaking with his team at intermission. Even with the offense sputtering, though, this remains the type of gritty, blue-collar game Oats wants -- a formula he believes will serve his team well in a single-elimination tournament setting. Physicality, defense and toughness often prevail, even when you can't throw it in the ocean.

"Quit avoiding contact. Get your butt to the free throw line," Oats tells his team before tipoff. "Soft teams can't win in March."

Ultimately, though, the Bulls prove to be anything but soft, prevailing with an 83-59 win while holding Ball State to a woeful 32 percent from the floor on 2-23 (8.7 percent) from 3, while turning the Cardinals over 18 times. Persons -- who averages 17 PPG -- is held to just six points on 2-of-12 shooting, one of the worst games of his career.

These days, there is a familiar sight at Bulls games for Oats, one which brings tremendous comfort. With Crystal's cancer in remission, she and their three daughters regularly attend games, even on the road. In the wake of Crystal's battle for her life, Oats now sees both basketball and life through a different, more balanced lens.

"When you go through cancer, there's a lot that's changed about me since three years ago," he said. "It puts everything in perspective. ... At the end of the day, there's no pressure. You're putting a ball through a ring. So I do think it's made me a better coach."

"There's stuff that you get as a teacher -- dealing with kids on an everyday basis -- that you don't get as an assistant. I taught these kids in class, but I taught their girlfriends. I had interactions with 150 kids a day for 11 years. There's all kinds of stuff that now I can relate better to. ... The unconventional route to where I've got, I wouldn't trade how I got here for anything."

How Nate Oats went from high school math teacher to the country's hottest coach

by Pete Thamel, Yahoo Sports (March 14, 2019)

When Buffalo coach Nate Oats' team upset Syracuse in the Carrier Dome earlier this year, he acted like there was nothing to be surprised about. He declared postgame that Buffalo had "better players," a "better team" and they "play harder." When No. 13 seed Buffalo stomped No. 4 Arizona in the NCAA tournament last season, Oats declared he'd gotten sick of "soft" Pac-12 teams failing to pressure the ball on game film.

His old boss at Buffalo, Arizona State's Bobby Hurley, told him the remark irked Pac-12 commissioner Larry Scott. "But you know what?" he told Yahoo Sports in his office recently. "They're worse this year than last year. Did I lie? Did I lie? I told the truth."

Oats, 44, has emerged as the runaway coaching star in college basketball this season. With Buffalo (29-3) poised to set the modern record for NCAA tournament seeding by a team from the MAC, Oats has built the runaway best team in program history. The twin storylines of underdog coach and the improbable power he's built -- No. 18 Buffalo has been ranked for 18 consecutive weeks -- have Buffalo poised to be March's most improbable story.

Less than six years ago, Oats was teaching five math classes a day -- algebra, geometry and statistics -- at Romulus High School in Michigan. He sold Flamin' Hot Cheetos, Capri Suns and Pop-Tarts out of his office to fundraise for his basketball program and in 11 seasons transformed the school into a state and national power.

In his fourth season as the head coach at Buffalo, Oats is headed to his third NCAA tournament and has managed to turn a school with little basketball tradition into, well, a state and national power. He's 93-42 over four seasons and delivered the school's first NCAA win over Arizona last season. With four seniors among their five leading scorers -- including star CJ Massinburg (18.5 ppg) -- they're poised to make more noise.

It doesn't add up, right? The former math teacher with a star player they beat out Prairie View A&M for in recruiting. No. 18 Buffalo's season is a tomahawk dunk that posterizes some of the sport's longtime conventions, a delicious anomaly of the unexpected, unfiltered and unflinching.

The Bulls have taken on the blunt-force personality of their coach, an indomitable combination of man-to-man defense and blue-collar attitude that no one would be surprised to see in the Sweet 16. Or beyond.

"He's a straight shooter, there's very little filter with Nate," said Arizona State Bobby Hurley, who hired him as an assistant at Buffalo in 2013. "There's almost a naïve youthfulness, as he just has a natural joy for the game of basketball."

Oats' creative fundraising
Oats is a former Division III point guard, the son of a theology professor whose background is more cafeteria-issued sporks than silver spoons. He served as an assistant at his alma mater, Maranatha Baptist, and then Wisconsin-Whitewater before his big break at Romulus, which came partly because his ability to teach math and coach appealed to the school.

He turned around Romulus at age 27 the same way he overhauled Buffalo. Romulus soon began running like a college program -- 6 a.m. workouts, study tables, strength training, speed training, academic advisers and daily film sessions. "When people ask me how much harder is it in Division I," Oats said, "I'm like, 'It was harder back at Romulus.'"

Regardless of how Buffalo finishes this season – and a MAC tournament title could vault them as high as a No. 4 seed in the NCAA tournament – Oats has positioned himself at the top of everyone's hot-coach list.

When Oats arrived at Romulus in 2002 the program had $78 in the fundraising account. In the final game of his debut season, they scored 35 points.

Oats' teams won a state title in 2013, earned USA Today Top 25 rankings in three different seasons and went to five state Final Fours. Oats also produced 18 Division I players, seeing enough college assistants come through his gym that he quickly realized he could do their job better.

By the time Oats left for Buffalo, he'd raised enough money for the team to have six shooting guns for skill development – the kind found in college and NBA practice facilities. Romulus had such a robust army of managers that it took Buffalo years to catch up to that level. The program held such cache in the Detroit area that families were moving into the district to play there.

"Anyone who played under him or coached under him, no one is surprised," said Josh Baker, Oats' close friend and former assistant. "The success he's had is expected. Honestly, I don't know if there is a ceiling."

Oats points out with pride that when he left to work for Hurley at Buffalo, there was $20,000 in the Romulus fundraising account. Much of that can be tied to the in-school snack service he founded and remembered fondly: Nate's Party Store.

Oats realized to deliver his program the trappings of an elite high school one, he needed to raise money. Top programs had high-end gear, money to take players on college visits and specialty items like foam rollers. Oats sold sponsorships, but Romulus' main financial driver came from a corner store he ran out of his classroom to raise money for the program. Nate's Party Store had two dorm refrigerators, boxes of granola bars, oatmeal pies and so many bags of Hot Cheetos – by far the best seller. It became such a booming business for the program that he bought a used mini-van for $1,200, removed the seats and made multiple trips to Sam's Club each week to fill it with supplies.

The store became so popular that faculty grumbled about it becoming an impediment over the years for kids getting to class on time. So Oats adjusted like any good coach. He got trusted players and managers to go sell in the hallways between classes, giving them bags of food to peddle to keep foot traffic moving. He estimated he made at least $500 per week, which added up to college-level gear for players and the ability to shuttle them to college visits.

"He outsold our regular school store and the gas station across the street," said former Romulus principal Hal Heard. "He did what he had to do to support the program."

Oats pulled it off with a style that was both aggressive and endearing. Sam Bonam, who ran the math lab at Romulus, taught Oats how to cut practice film on an Apple computer. Oats was so appreciative of Bonam's help with the program that he once volunteered to go to Bonam's house to install a hardwood floor.

"He'd do anything for anyone," Bonam said. "It was all about helping the players develop and the program. It wasn't just about him getting to the next level. He stayed for 11 years."

How long will Oats stay at Buffalo? As Buffalo hits the closing stretch of their historic season, the inevitable question lingers as to how long Oats will stick around. Buffalo athletic director Mark Alnutt reached a new deal with Oats after the Bulls' win on Thursday, which is obviously a good sign. Oats says he lacks a burning desire to leave for a big-time program. He said he just bought a million-dollar home in the area, and his wife, Crystal, and their three girls – Lexie (14), Jocie (9) and Brielle (6) – are comfortable there.

Not surprisingly, a guy who less than six years ago was selling Hot Cheetos for an edge now dreams that Buffalo could turn into a Butler or Gonzaga.

"If I were to leave, it would have to be something really, really good that just made a lot of sense," Oats said. "Like I would not want to leave for a job that I didn't think you could really win at."

The coach at nearby Daemen College, Mike MacDonald, pays the highest compliment to Oats' job at Buffalo. "The games are an event now," he said.

Buffalo averaged 5,289 fans per game, 800 fans more than its next-best season and second most in the MAC behind Ohio. The students and locals have rallied around the team's ethos, as Oats gives out a blue hard hat to the player who compiles the most "blue-collar points" in a game. It's an equation of deflections, floor dives, charges and other hustle metrics. Oats even came up with a "linear-regression equation" to show the correlation between hustle points and actual ones as a motivator for his players.

Alnutt knows the simplest equation for the show to continue rolling: Keep Oats around. Oats was making nearly $600,000 per year with his old deal and presumably got a sizable raise with his new deal. But there are realities to sticking around the MAC. He's already on his third athletic director, as both Danny White (UCF) and Allen Greene (Auburn) have moved on since his promotion to head coach.

"We're going to put our best foot forward to be able to retain him," Alnutt said. "A school could come in with crazy numbers, $2 million or $3 million [per year]. We can't match that. We can put together a package where he truly feels appreciative of the commitment we have for him. More importantly, the commitment we have for his program."

Less than six years after selling Cheetos and Pop-Tarts out of his classroom to raise money, power conference schools could end up bidding for Oats. It's a rare trajectory that adds up perfectly to those who knew Oats the math teacher long before he became the coveted coach.

Soon after Oats got the Romulus job, he called his close friend and old college teammate Baker to come join him. Baker was nervous because he lacked coaching experience and asked Oats if he should read a book by Pat Riley or Mike Krzyzewski. "Books?" Oats asked. "Shoot, they'll write books about us."

Seniors play key role in putting No. 19 Buffalo on the map

by John Wawrow, Associated Press (March 7, 2019)

Growing up in Dallas, CJ Massinburg never heard of Buffalo, never mind knew it featured a college with a Division I basketball program.

"I didn't even know what or where Buffalo was, to be honest," the Bulls senior guard recalled with a chuckle this week. "Before I took my visit, I told everybody, 'Hey, I'm going to take a visit to Buffalo.' And all my friends were like, 'What's that? Where's that?'"

On Friday, Massinburg will join four fellow seniors in playing their final home game, while appreciating how he played a significant role in spending the past four years placing Buffalo firmly on the map.

"Man, as I look back at my college career, that's one thing I'll be most proud of," Massinburg said.

He and the No. 19 Mid-American Conference Bulls (27-3, 15-2) have an opportunity to further broaden the mid-major's stamp on the national basketball landscape before the year is out.

Massinburg is part of a team that's already matched last season's school-record win total, which included a first-round tournament victory over Arizona. Buffalo's been a fixture in the national rankings for 18 consecutive weeks — a MAC record. The Bulls, who count wins over Syracuse, West Virginia and San Francisco, are already in position to have clinched their fourth NCAA Tournament berth in five years no matter how they fair in the conference tournament in Cleveland next week.

And in closing the regular season against Bowling Green (20-10, 12-5) on Friday night, Buffalo has already clinched first place and has a chance to win its 26th consecutive home game and match the nation's longest active streak held by No. 5 Tennessee.

One step at a time, Massinburg said in trying to put aside the distractions of Senior Night, and playing before family, friends and a sellout crowd.

"I'm kind of trying to stay in the moment," Massinburg said, while noting Buffalo's last loss was at Bowling Green on Feb. 1. "Beating Bowling Green is everything."

Coach Nate Oats acknowledged he might have difficulty of containing his emotions.

"I don't cry very often, but I might, when I think about all that stuff that they've done," he said, referring to his five seniors. "You can probably talk five minutes on each kid, but I'll have to condense it to a couple of minutes on the five so we can get everybody out of here at a decent time."

No one, including himself, anticipated this season's success.

"Nobody thought it could be like this," Oats said. "And those guys believed. Those guys turned it this way. So Friday night's going to be special."

Massinburg and forward Nick Perkins have played all four seasons at Buffalo. Senior guard and defensive specialist Dontay Caruthers has spent three years with the Bulls, while senior wingmen Jeremy Harris and Montell McRae are completing their second seasons as junior college transfers. Perkins and Caruthers come off the bench, while the Bulls starters are rounded out by guards, Davonta Jordan, a junior, and sophomore Jayvon Graves.

Together, they've adopted Oats' relentless, high-tempo approach that keys off a smothering defense and translates to scoring chances in transition.

It's a style that's provided the Bulls the ability to blow out teams, as they did in a 114-67 win over Ohio three weeks ago. Or they can simply wear down opponents, as happened two weeks ago when Buffalo out-scored Akron 14-2 over the final four minutes of a 77-64 win in a game that featured 12 lead changes.

Oats is hardly satisfied, and perturbed over how the Bulls struggled on defense in their last outing, an 82-79 win at Ohio on Tuesday. And he takes no consolation in knowing Buffalo's resume might be good enough to have already locked up a tournament berth.

The objective now is impressing the selection committee to earn as high of a seed as possible. After advancing to the second round last year, Oats is focused on Buffalo reaching the second weekend.

Only 10 MAC teams have advanced to the Sweet 16, with the last being Ohio in 2012. Kent State, in 2002, was the last of only two conference teams to reach the Round of Eight. No MAC school has earned a seed higher than ninth since the tournament expanded to 64 teams in 1985.

This is no time to falter, Massinburg said.

"Our goal is to make it to that second weekend, the Sweet 16, and if we're messing around and get a bad seeding, then we're going to be playing some heavy hitters early," he said.

Asked why stop at the Sweet 16, Massinburg laughed and said: "You're right. We want to take it all the way, baby."

Explosive Jayvon Graves takes a great leap forward for No. 19 UB

by Mark Gaughan, Buffalo News (March 7, 2019)

The roster lists Jayvon Graves at 6-foot-3. Talk about misleading.

The sophomore guard for the University at Buffalo plays so much bigger because of his leaping ability.

Just ask West Virginia's 6-8 Lamont West. He got posterized under the basket on a Graves dunk that went viral in November. Or ask Akron's 6-8 center Emmanuel Olojakpoke. He got what looked like a sure layup blocked by Graves two weeks ago.

"Jayvon plays way bigger because he's so explosive, he's big and strong, and he gets off the ground so quick," said UB coach Nate Oats. "He can go in and get rebounds because he's built like a man and he jumps so well."

Graves' emergence in a supporting role has been one of the reasons the 19th-ranked Bulls have been able to stay in the top 25 for 17 straight weeks.

Everybody knew entering the season UB had a great "Big Three" in CJ Massinburg, Nick Perkins and Jeremy Harris. The consistency of senior guard Dontay Caruthers and Graves' development have given the Bulls' five legitimate scoring options on any given night.

Graves has started every game for the Bulls and is averaging 9.7 points and 4.2 rebounds a game. That's up from 5.1 and 2.3 as a freshman.

Graves also has improved his shooting from 38 percent overall to 47 percent overall, and he's shooting a solid 38.3 percent from three-point range.

He's ascending. The past five games, Graves is averaging 14 points and shooting 57 percent.

"I keep trying to get him to be more aggressive, and he has been more aggressive this last month," Oats said. "In conversations with him, he made the point that he's playing his role. I've made the point: Your role needs to increase."

Graves' athleticism helps him fit right in with UB's fleet of tenacious perimeter defenders. He owns a team-best vertical jump of 39.5 inches. (That would have ranked fifth among all cornerbacks at the NFL scouting combine this week.) Graves ranks No. 2 among all guards in the MAC in blocks with 27.

"Defense, that's the way to get on the floor in college," Graves said. "Blocking shots is something I feel I can do really well. This year I feel way better on defense and I feel like I can guard anyone, one through four" (point guard to power forward).

Graves was a big recruit for Oats two years ago.

He played for Akron, Ohio, powerhouse St. Vincent/St. Mary, the alma mater of LeBron James.

Graves went 78-10 over his last three prep seasons. His team, coached by highly respected Dru Joyce, was ranked No. 3 in the nation for part of his sophomore year. It lost in the state title game his junior year and won the state title (thanks to Graves' 25-point performance in the final) his senior year.

He picked UB over Toledo and Fordham.

"It really showed me that winning is all that matters," Graves said of his high school experience. "Every college coach wants a winner, and that's the reason I picked here. Being on a team that wins is what matters to me. Playing with great players helps me get better."

"He could have gone to a program where he would have been The Man right away," Oats said. "He wanted to come someplace where he's winning, knowing that he may have to not play as many minutes. He's a winner. And he was coached. He came into college having been coached very well, so he was ready to play."

Graves has met James once, and he played in front of him once a year in high school.

"When he was in the stands, you could tell everybody you're playing against was trying their hardest to impress him," Graves said. "He's there to support the family he created. The first time he came, I might have been nervous. By my senior year, I knew it was my time and I wasn't nervous at all."

Graves now is 131-19 the past five years. He knows what a winning locker room feels like.

"I'm happy about the way we've competed this year," he said. "I feel like everybody's getting along with each other. We all have a good chemistry that helps us on and off the court. Just the culture here, everybody's close and it's very competitive. That helps me get better."

"Obviously everybody sees all the put-back dunks and fast-break, 360 dunks he gets," Caruthers said. "But nobody talks about his shooting. He's shooting at a great clip right now. His defense has picked up way better since his freshman year."

Graves is a big reason UB's outlook for next year is promising, despite the fact five seniors graduate.

Graves' averages per 40 minutes are comparable to Massinburg's sophomore-season numbers.

Massinburg averaged 17.9 points and 6.9 rebounds per 40 minutes. Graves is averaging 15.9 and 6.7 boards.

"That doesn't surprise me," Oats said. "CJ played more minutes that year, and we weren't as good. But we've all said since Jayvon got here, he's got as much potential as anybody in this program."

How UB forward Nick Perkins got a grip to become the MAC's best sixth man

by Rachel Lenzi, Associated Press (March 14, 2019)

When then-sophomore Nick Perkins was ejected from a 74-72 loss to Ohio in January of 2017, the University at Buffalo men's basketball coaching staff contacted Chris Pope, Perkins' former basketball coach at Milan (Mich.) High School, and asked for help.

Pope got on the horn with Perkins and Latin Davis, Perkins' best friend since the sixth grade. It wasn't necessarily an intervention, but it was the quick organization of a three-person support group that talked on the phone every Thursday for a year.

Pope and Davis helped Perkins, who is affable away from the basketball court, realize the value of his composure on the court. In order to be a great player and a great teammate, he had to control his emotions and channel his anger, frustration, and even elation into something positive that would benefit him and the Bulls.

Sometimes that meant Perkins had to apologize to his teammates. Other times, it meant he had to walk away from an opponent or a referee and bite his tongue, willing himself not to start an argument that, ultimately, would be inconsequential. Sometimes, it even meant asking for help.

"It's had its ups and downs," said Perkins, a 6-foot-8 senior forward who has averaged 14.8 points and 7.3 rebounds in 31 games this season. "Just being who I am, off the court, I'm a chill guy, but on the court, I'm a really intense guy, and I'm very competitive. So, over the years, I've learned my fair share of what's bad and what's good.

"My focus, and being able to do the right thing when things don't go your way, that's brought me a long way."

The No. 1-seeded Bulls (28-3) open the MAC Tournament at noon Thursday in Cleveland against No. 8 seed Akron. Perkins' personal growth and his contributions off the bench as a three-time MAC Sixth Man of the Year have been a major factor in helping UB pursue its fourth NCAA Tournament berth since 2015.

"I don't think that if Nick matures at the level that he has, that we're even close to where we are right now," UB coach Nate Oats said.

Becoming the sixth man
Perkins started 22 games in his first two seasons at UB, but Oats noticed how Perkins was eager. Sometimes, too eager. Perkins made mistakes, or committed early fouls that limited his playing time later in the game.

Oats and his staff figured out how to make Perkins his most effective: turn him into the first player off the bench. The sixth man.

Perkins usually watches the first few minutes of the game from the bench, and enters the game during the fourth or fifth minute. He brings an edge to the team when he steps onto the court.

In an 80-57 win against Kent State on Feb. 22, Perkins boosted an offense that, at one point, moved at a snail's crawl. The Bulls had scored 10 points in the first 9:32, and were on pace to finish with around 40 points, an uncharacteristically low total for a team that leads the MAC in scoring offense (85 points per game).

UB guard CJ Massinburg recalled how, a few minutes after Perkins entered the game and immediately told his teammates on the floor that "we've got to pick up the pace here."

"That's not like us, because we're a team that picks up a lot of points," Massinburg said. "He let us know that we needed to do a better job of that."

Then, in the final 1:15 of the first half, Perkins sparked a 10-point swing in which he scored eight of his game-high 27 points.

"At the beginning of the game, everybody can be a little eager and excited, but he gets to see how the other team is playing, how we're playing and what he has to do," Massinburg said of Perkins. "Every time he checks in, he gives us some kind of insight from what he sees, off the bench."

Perkins' maturation and unselfishness on the floor have stood out to Massinburg.

"His first couple years, he'd shoot it, no matter what happens," Massinburg said. "But now, one thing it does for him, it opens up the floor. If we're hitting open threes off his passes, then the double-team can't come anymore and now he knows he can get his shots off."

But Perkins' fiery nature has also burned the Bulls.

Pressing pause
Perkins admits he wears his heart on his sleeve, but he reached a point during his sophomore year where his emotions began to affect his performance, and, by extension, his team.

That ejection against Ohio became the tipping point for Perkins, for the Bulls and for people close to him. Pope said Oats and former UB assistant Lindsey Hunter reached out to him and asked him to speak with Perkins.

Then Pope and Davis called Perkins. And they called Perkins again. And again. And again. Every Thursday for more than a year.

"Coach Pope, he's always been on both of us, but it was because he wanted to see us grow as better people, not just as players," Davis said. "He always stayed on Nick more because he knew Nick had a temper, since we were in middle school.

"But coach Pope, myself, other coaches, they did such a good job of helping Nick keep his emotions down, and he's improved so much."

Knowing the competitive nature of his former player, Pope set some constructive boundaries and guidelines for Perkins in those conversations.

"I tell him, 'Tell people if you're having a bad day. Tell Coach Oats if you're not feeling right, or tell someone if you're upset,'" Pope said.

"It's a balancing act for him, and I tell him all the time, 'I get it.' But I also tell him, 'These are things along your journey that you will have to deal with, and you have to deal with it now, rather than when you have the biggest obstacles in front of you."

That support gave Perkins the motivation to behave and to ask for help.

He meets once a week with Arnie Guin, a mental skills coach who works with the Bulls, to identify things that may trigger him, or to walk through problem-solving scenarios. And, like Pope encouraged him, Perkins tells people exactly how he's feeling.

"People have problems, and they don't want help," Oats said. "Nick sees a problem, he wants help and he welcomes people talking to him, and he'll talk about it.

"We all make mistakes, and nobody's perfect, but Nick makes a mistake and he handles it well after, so I've got a lot of respect for him, that way. He's always been good at recognizing his wrongs, but it's gone from more, 'I'm sorry I'm being punished,' to 'I'm sorry I'm acting this way, because I know this is not how I want to act or how I should act.' It's more, 'I really want to change now.'"

Perkins remembers how he used to behave when things didn't go the way he wanted on the basketball court. Now, instead of raising his voice, lashing out at an official or throwing a tantrum, Perkins has found ways to handle his emotions.

"It's a struggle that he's had, but one thing he does, he asks for help," Massinburg said. "He says to us, 'Hey, if I ever get riled up, come talk to me, and ask me to press pause, to relax a little bit.'"

"He's not only making us a better basketball team. He's making himself a better person, and he's also building good habits for the future."

Controlling the fire
The fire is there for Perkins, but it's a matter of keeping it in the fireplace as opposed to letting the flames get out of control.

"We want fire in you," Oats said. "Just direct it in the right direction."

Sometimes, Perkins' emotions still get the better of him. In a 77-64 win against Akron on Feb. 26, he was called for a technical foul following a scuffle after the whistle. Earlier this season, he was benched in the first half of a 90-76 win against Central Michigan for a violation of team rules, and watched as his team trailed by 18 points in the first half.

Oats called it "a small, minor violation" after the win against the Chippewas. Without acknowledging the reason for his benching, Perkins said he understood why.

He also said he handled the benching a month ago differently than he would have two years ago.

"I would have been really immature about it," Perkins said. "When I got in, I wouldn't have been able to keep my mental composure and actually play. When it happened a few weeks ago, I was able to just play through it and be the leader that we need, knowing that I was going to have to come in and help us out in the second half, to get the win."

The Thursday conversations with Pope and Latin Davis have run their course, but Pope reaches out to Perkins on a weekly basis, mostly by text message. His notes are more than just a few characters.

"I let him do his thing, but I'm still critiquing him as a basketball player, and telling him to stay hungry, to stay humble," Pope said. "And to keep grinding. There's a lot more out there for Nick."

Perkins probably couldn't have recognized those boundaries, or reached this point without help from Pope and Davis.

"When we were younger, Nick always wanted to get riled up, and he'd want to fight or do something like that, but he was never a bad person," Davis said. "His emotions came out and always got the best of him.

"But to see that he's controlling it, putting it all together and growing as a person, that's such a good thing."

Buffalo's CJ Massinburg made his own plan to become one of college basketball's top scorers

by Dana O'Neil, The Athletic (December 28, 2018)

On his official visit to Buffalo, C.J. Massinburg sat across from Nate Oats, listening as the new head coach charted the kid's most likely basketball path at the school. This was in early May of 2015. Massinburg was 1,350 miles from home. In a month's time, he would graduate high school, which meant the 11th hour had about passed on his college basketball clock. He was essentially down to three choices: Prairie View A&M, the only other school to offer him a scholarship; junior college; or whatever Oats recommended.

Four years later Massinburg is averaging 17.9 points per game for an 11-1 Buffalo team ranked 21st in the nation. In a season in which everyone is searching for the next Loyola-Chicago, the senior helped the Bulls make their case when he scored 43 in an overtime win at West Virginia in the season's first week. He has since reached double figures in all but one game, including 25 in a second-half comeback win at Syracuse that upended the natural order of things in New York basketball.

Oats would love to spin the story, to say he was smarter than everyone else, saw something in Massinburg that everyone missed and laid out a full-proof plan for the kid's success. The truth is, Oats never saw C.J. Massinburg so much as shoot a basket until he showed up on that official visit and never saw him in a live game until after he signed him. His brilliant plan was to redshirt Massinburg and figure things out from there. "He kept saying to me, 'Just give me a shot. That's all I ask. Just give me a shot,'" Oats remembers. "I promised him that if he was good enough, he'd play. And then he goes out and drops 17 on Duke as a freshman. He was good enough."

Massinburg always believed he was good enough in most everything he tried, carefully and appropriately toeing the line between confidence and arrogance. Having grown up around musicians — his mother, Karen, is the choir director at the family's church in Dallas; brother, Russell, plays bass guitar; and sister, India, sings — he willingly hopped on stage as a fill-in on drums when the church drummer abruptly stepped down. He loved music and still does, evidenced by a recent video of him stealing a few minutes on a Southern Illinois pep band drum kit, but he loved basketball even more. He's not sure where his passion came from — his father, Russell, played pickup ball, yet was fueled more by a fierce competitive streak than skill — but says his mother has pictures of him as a toddler, grinning ear to ear with a hoop.

He worked his way through high school ball, earning a spot on the varsity as a sophomore as a catch-and-shoot player, before evolving into a more complete player who averaged almost 20 points a game in his junior season. He played grassroots ball with DJHS, checking all the proper boxes to get discovered by college coaches. Only none found him, even though he was hiding in the broad daylight of the Dallas recruiting hotbed. "He just fell through the cracks," says James Mays, Massinburg's coach at South Oak Cliff High School. "Even now I don't have an answer for it." Adds Oats, "It makes zero sense. Zero." Mays did what he could, cold-calling college coaches he knew in the area, vouching to everyone he knew that Massinburg was as solid a citizen as he was a basketball player.

Yet even after Massinburg dropped 42 in a game against Spruce High School, averaged 22 points, six rebounds and four assists and led South Oak Cliff to a 31-8 record, the only school that came calling was Prairie View A&M, a SWAC school near Houston that hasn't tasted the NCAA Tournament since 1998. "I did the work, but the offers weren't coming in," Massinburg says. "I didn't understand. I had 42 in a game. What else do you have to do to get an offer? What, do you have to fly?"

Discouraged but not defeated, Massinburg took a last-ditch trip to Indianapolis during the April recruiting period, hoping he'd catch someone's eye. He did — the eye of a guy who didn't have a scholarship to give. Fortunately, Dusty May knew a friend who did. May, now the coach at Florida Atlantic, was at the time an assistant at Louisiana Tech. He and Oats first met years earlier when Oats was the coach at Romulus High School in Detroit, May an assistant at Eastern Michigan. And by convenient coincidence, Mike White, the Louisiana Tech coach and May's boss at the time, also happened to be the big brother of Oats' new boss, Buffalo athletic director Danny White (who has since moved on to Central Florida).

Oats was just weeks into the Buffalo job, taking over after Bobby Hurley left for Arizona State, and dealing with the typical roster shakeup following a coaching change. Torian Graham and Shannon Evans ultimately would follow Hurley to Tempe, while recruits Maurice O'Field and Nate Navigato opted to reconsider their commitments. Oats had spots to fill and not a lot of time to fill them when May called. On May's advice, Oats dispatched assistant coach Jim Whitesell to watch Massinburg in Indianapolis. Three games later, Whitesell deemed Massinburg good enough to warrant an official visit. "I figured, 'Let's bring him in. Why not?'" Oats says. "That was it."

Massinburg sat across from Oats during that official visit fully aware he needed the coach more than the coach needed him. He was in no position to negotiate. Had Oats insisted on that redshirt season, Massinburg would have accepted it. But when Oats left the door open? It's funny what happens to a person when things don't come easily. Massinburg today looks around college basketball, eyeing the ever-increasing number of transfers and players counting up minutes they believed they're owed and wonders, what about the minutes earned? "In college, everyone scored 20 in high school, so you have to be able to play whatever role you have to in order to get on the court," he says. "I don't think enough people understand that. I knew once I got a chance, I could score. I just had to get the chance." He got it by playing defense.

Only an average defender upon arrival in Oats' estimation, Massinburg worked his way into being an indispensable one, forcing the coach to scrap any plans of that redshirt season. By the end of his freshman season, Massinburg averaged 25 minutes and 11 points per game, earned All-MAC freshman honors and seven starts. "He's not the quickest guy or the strongest. He's not the best anything except being an ultra, ultra competitor," Oats says. "He wanted to get on that floor. That's all he wanted."

At least that's all he wanted then. Massinburg since has adjusted his goals. He ranks fifth on the school's career scoring list, with eyes on the top spot held by Javon McCrea. But Buffalo has just 19 regular-season games left and Massinburg has a 453-point gap to close. Lengthening the season would help. Conveniently, lengthening the season is more important to Massinburg than scoring points.

He may have wound up at Buffalo with no other options, but he has since found a city and a community that suit him. The people are no-nonsense and blue-collar, the sort who don't merely value hard work but expect it. The city, of course, has long suffered with its sports teams, the Bills and Sabres providing more pain than relief. The university has offered a reprieve this year, the Bulls' upset of Arizona in the NCAA Tournament last March followed by the football team's bowl bid. But rather than sate the appetite, the success has whetted it, fans anxious for more, especially from a veteran basketball team filled with so much promise. Massinburg is reminded of all of that on his visits to Signature Cuts barbershop on Main Street, where the regulars are always quick to serve a helping of reality alongside their platiful of dreams. Yes, there is the talk of a deep NCAA run, of being this year's Loyola, but Buffalo also just lost to Marquette, Markus Howard torching the Bulls for 45 points. "I appreciate the criticism and the honesty," Massinburg says. "This has been crazy, the way it's all paying off. But there is still work to do."

Five Years.

Four Championships.
